

Believe it or not, the little car is as big as the bigger car.

To believe that the 11' 6" Renault 5 is as big as the bigger car in our picture may, you feel, be asking you to stretch your imagination just a little too far.

So please, don't take our word for it. Take 'Autocar's'. According to their measurements, the Renault 5 has more head room than the bigger car. Both front and back.

More room for the driver's knees under the steering wheel. And more room between the driver's seat back and the steering wheel.

As the bigger car is seven inches wider than the Renault, you'd naturally expect the seating to be wider too. And you'd be right; just. The bigger car gives you an extra half inch of interior width at the front; and the rear seat is just over an inch wider than the Renault's.

Again, logic dictates that the bigger car must have the edge over the Renault on luggage space.

In this case logic is right. And wrong.

Right when all five seats in the Renault 5 are occupied. Wrong when the back bench is tipped forward. Then, the 5 saloon becomes an estate. Complete with 32 cu. ft. of estate car luggage space. And a counter-balanced tailgate to fill it through.

At this point, honesty dictates that we admit our admiration for fine cars like the Chrysler 180 in our picture. It has many impressive features.

Radial ply tyres, for instance. Heated rear window. Front disc brakes. An alternator. In fact, we think these features are so admirable that we put them all in the Renault 5.

But we do have to admit there are some vital areas, in which the Renault 5 doesn't compare.

Would you believe that the small car is less than two-thirds the price of the bigger car? And a lot easier to park?
